Robert J. Carroll is Co-leader of Ernst & Young LLP's Quantitative Economics and Statistics (QUEST) group. Based in Washington, D.C., Bob is an advisor to public and private clients on a broad range of policy issues, including federal tax policy, tax reform, macroeconomic impact analyses, and revenue impact analyses of policy changes. He co-leads a group of quantitative analysts who assist clients with tax and economic policy studies.

Before joining EY, Bob was the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Tax Analysis of the US Treasury Department where he served as the Department's top economist working on tax policy issues. Bob oversaw the Department's work on developing business tax reforms to improve the global competitiveness of the United States and efforts to reform the tax system. He oversaw the Department's efforts related to two reports released in 2007 on approaches to make the US income tax system more competitive, as well as the Department's efforts on behalf of the 2005 President's Advisory Panel on Federal Tax Reform.

Previously, Bob served as a Visiting Scholar with the Congressional Budget Office and Senior Economist for Public Economics with the President's Council on Economic Advisers. Prior to joining Ernst & Young, Bob was on the faculty of American University's School of Public Affairs and a Senior Fellow with the Tax Foundation.

Bob has testified before the Congress on a wide range of tax issues including tax reform, value-added taxation, tax expenditures, the taxation of pass-through businesses, the alternative minimum tax, health care, the solvency of the highway trust funds, and expiring tax provisions. He has published numerous papers on a wide range of tax issues in academic and other journals and in 2011 co-authored the book, Progressive Consumption Taxation – The X Tax Revisited (w/ Alan Viard).

Bob received his B.S. from the State University of New York at Albany and his M.A. and Ph.D. in economics from Syracuse University.
